Landesbibliothek Oldenburg

Digitalisierung von Drucken

The History Of Tom Jones, A Foundling

In Four Volumes

Fielding, Henry London, 1750

Chap. II. Containing a Conversation which Mr. Jones had himself.

urn:nbn:de:gbv:45:1-884

Many contending Passions were raised in our Heroe's Mind bil this I At H' Dout the Tender prevailed at laft over the Indignant and Iraf-Containing a Conversation which Mr. Jones had his Afritance, and Islamid driver evented his Miffortunes from either turning his Head, or burfling

TONES received his Effects from Mr. Allworthy's early in the Morning, with the following Answer to his Letter, bas a yboman and then, I will give Mr. Aliwardy the duly In-france he requires of my Obedience. I wat &o Am commanded by my Uncle to acquaint you, that as he did not proceed to those Measures he had taken with you, without the greatest Deliberation, and after the fullest Evidence of your Unworthiness, so will it be always out of your Power to cause the least Alteration in his Resolution. He expresses great Surprize at your Prefumption in faying, you have refigned all Pretentions to a young Lady, to whom it is impossible you should ever have had any, her Birth and Fortune having made her fo infinitely your Superior. Lastly, I am commanded to tell you, that the only Instance ' of your Compliance with my Uncle's Inclinations, which he requires, is, your immediately quitting this Country. I cannot conclude this without offering you my Advice, as a Christian, that you would feriously think of amending your Life: That you may be affifted with Grace 6 fo to do, will be always the Prayer of

Your humble Servant,

hon in a B. Wouth and found a Vent at his

Many

Many contending Passions were raised in our Heroe's Mind by this Letter; but the Tender prevailed at last over the Indignant and Irascible, and a Flood of Tears came seasonably to his Assistance, and possibly prevented his Missortunes from either turning his Head, or bursting his Heart.

He grew, however, foon ashamed of indulging this Remedy; and starting up, he cried, 'Well then, I will give Mr. Allworthy the only Inflance he requires of my Obedience. I will go this Moment-but whither?-why let Fortune direct; fince there is no other who thinks it of any Confequence what becomes of this wretched Person, it shall be a Matter of equal Indifference to myfelf. Shall I alone regard what no other? -- Ha! have I not Reason to think there is another? - One whose Value is above that of the whole World ! --- I may, I must imagine my Sophia is not indifferent to what becomes of me. Shall I then leave this only Friend-And fuch a Friend? Shall I not flay with her? - Where? How can I flay with her? Have I any Hopes of ever feeing her, tho' fhe was as defirous as myfelf, without expoling her to the Wrath of her Father? And to what Purpose? Can I think of foliciting fuch a Creature to consent to her own Ruin? Shall I indulge any Passion of mine at such a • Price? -- Shall I lurk about this Country like a Thief, with fuch Intentions? --- No, I difdain, I detest the Thought. Farewel, Sophia; farewel most lovely, most beloved --- Here Pasfion stopped his Mouth, and found a Vent at his Eyes.

And now, having taken a Resolution to leave the Country, he began to debate with himself whither he should go. The World, as Milton phrases it, lay all before him; and Jones, no more than Alam, had any Man to whom he might refort for Comfort or Affistance. All his Acquaintance were the Acquaintance of Mr. Allworthy, and he had no Reason to expect any Countenance from them, as that Gentleman had withdrawn h's Favour from him. Men of great and good Characters should indeed be very cautious how they discard their Dependents; for the Consequence to the unhappy Sufferer is being discarded by all others and supermoselvede Beiene ada'

What Course of Life to pursue, or to what Bufiness to apply himself, was a second Consideration; and here the Prospect was all a melancholy Void. Every Profession, and every Trades. required Length of Time, and what was worfe, Money; for Matters are fo constituted, that Nothing out of Nothing' is not a truer Maxim in Physics than in Politics; and every Man who is greatly deflitute of Money, is on that Account entirely excluded from all Means of acquiring it, it to be a consequent of any any and bards At last the Ocean, that hospitable Friend to the Wretched, opened her capacious Arms to receive him; and he instantly resolved to accept her kind Invitation. To express myself less figuratively, he determined to go to Sea.

This Thought indeed no fooner fuggefted itfelf, than he eagerly embraced it; and having presently hired Horses, he set out for Bristol to Resention Philotopheys, theh at put it in Execution, and and a supply post son

Bandagta of the four your oute hor ; there But